Infection Control - Take the Guesswork Out of Compliance

Coming into compliance with the new infection control regulations can leave you scratching your head and wondering just how this is going to work! In this session we will take the guesswork out by reviewing the regulatory guidance. Then, together, we will formulate the building blocks for an infection control program that not only meets the regulation but works in your facility to keep your census healthy. This foundation will prepare your staff to use antibiotics wisely, reduce infection rates, and improve infection responses.

ABOUT THE PRESENTER

Cheryl Parsons is a registered nurse, long-term care administrator, former skilled facility owner, author, long-term care consultant, speaker and informal dispute resolution reviewer. She has over 36 years of combined nursing, administration, ownership and consulting experience in the industry and has received awards in recognition of her accomplishments and dedication to improving long term care. Cheryl speaks passionately about person-centered care and has dedicated a large part of her speaking career to motivating providers at all levels to leave the institutional model behind. She has published two books, "The Core Building Blocks of Quality in LTC," and "The Crucial Role of Social Services in Long Term Care." In addition she has prepared and spoken on over 500 seminar programs on various issues which challenge the industry. In July of 2011 she began work with Primaris, Missouri's Quality Improvement Organization, as an Informal Dispute Resolution Reviewer.
